

The United States of America is at a point in its history where its values and traditions are at risk of utter destruction, and its democracy near extinction, at the hands of the gravest enemy threat the nation has ever faced. The enemy force is of a different kind than we have been taught to believe. It is not foreign, but domestic . . . it is not bound by ideology, yet uses it to maintain its presence and cause division. It is not among us . . . because it has set itself above us. The threat comes from an elitist class of individuals who are bent on total control of all economic, social, and political matters in America, without an opportunity for us to have any sort of impact on what is and is not in the United States. We the People, the true holders of political power, are faced with a choice: do nothing and allow elitism to have its way, killing democracy and freedom in the process . . . or stand up, speak out, and take back the power of decision in government, in society, and in our lives. Don't Tread on US: A Call to Action is written in support of the latter choice, in the hopes that the common men and women of America can unite in a people's coalition against the two major parties and their big-money backers and save the United States from a dark future . . .
