

The oldest profession has nearly always been suppressed most societies and the attempts to do so are as old as the profession itself. In this 1873 treatise on the social control of prostitution, Dr. Edmund Andrews compares social and legal practices in Europe to those in the United States. He finds the European solutions wanting and suggests alternatives of his own. Andrews helped found the Chicago Academy of Science and was its first president. He was one of the founders of the Chicago Medical College and was its first professor of surgery. As pioneer in surgery and medical education, a Civil War surgeon, and practicing physician, he provides case studies of prostitutes and their clients. For the first time, this long-out-of-print book is available as an affordable, well-formatted book for e-readers and smartphones. Be sure to LOOK INSIDE or download a sample.
